

Hidden River Cave is the centerpiece of the beautiful National Register of Historic Places Commercial District in tiny downtown Horse Cave, Kentucky, just about 10 miles from Mammoth Cave National Park. The impressive entrance is the largest natural entrance in Kentucky's cave area. It lies directly adjacent to Main Street, and the cave runs beneath the town's streets and sidewalks.

Famed naturalist John Muir described Hidden River Cave on his 1867 A Thousand Mile Walk to the Gulf. "The entrance seems like a noble gateway to the birthplace of springs and fountains and the dark treasures of the mineral kingdom. This cave is in a village ... which it supplies with an abundance of cold water, and cold air that issues from its fern-clad lips. In hot weather crowds of people sit about it in the shade of the trees that guard it. This magnificent fan is capable of cooling everybody in the town at once."

The cave was the source of water for Native Americans and early settlers. Later the energy of the rushing river was harnessed, making the tiny town the first in the state outside of Louisville to have electricity. In 1916, a half mile-long section of Horse Cave was opened to the public for tours. As part of a promotion, owner Dr. H.B. Thomas ran a local contest to rename the cave, and the name "Hidden River Cave" was chosen for tourist use. Pollution closed the cave to visitors in the early 1940s for about four decades, but what has been called one of the greatest cave recoveries in history has transformed Hidden River Cave from one of the most polluted to one of the most biologically diverse cave ecosystems in the world.

The cave reopened to visitors in 1993 and today visitors can learn about the cave's history and recovery at the adjacent American Cave Museum, and they can take a tour across the world's longest underground cave suspension bridge to view the huge Sunset Dome. The more adventurous can opt for an off-trail Wild Cave Tour, a zip line across the mouth of the cave, and a rappel down the cave's limestone face. There's even an award-winning Horse Cave Stories cell phone tour that traces the pathway of cave beneath your feet past the cute shops in the historic district.

The cave is open year-round. Tickets and hours of operation information are available at hiddenrivercave.com. Regular tour tickets are also available at the door. Reservations are required for the Wild Cave Tour, and we also suggest phoning 270.786.1466 ahead for zip and rappel availability.
