The 2022 SAR Annual Conference on the American Revolution

The American Revolution
on the Frontier

June 3-5, 2022

Wyndham Grand Hotel
600 Commonwealth Place
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15222

On October 7, 1763, King George III issued a Royal Proclamation that forbade Americans from moving west of the Appalachians. The King intended to organize this land, which had been recently ceded to Great Britain from France, and to stabilize relations with Native Americans. Colonial officials were forbidden to grant land west of the Appalachians without royal approval. But many Americans had already settled in the west, and viewed the Royal Proclamation as an infringement on their liberty. As the Revolution unfolded on the east coast, Americans also fought vigorously in the west. The American Revolution on the frontier illustrates the continental extent of the war and its ideology. How similar was the Revolution in the West to the Revolution in the East? How did Native Americans factor in the Anglo-American conflict? And how did the war impact settlements in the West, both during and immediately following the conflict? The American Revolution on the Frontier seeks to explore these and other questions, and to broaden our understanding of the range of the American struggle for Independence and Liberty.

Seanegan P. Sculley of the U.S. Military Academy is serving as the SAR Distinguished Scholar for this conference. The American Revolution on the Frontier shall be dedicated to Colin G. Calloway of Dartmouth College.
